Two Survivors of the Wrecked Slaver Tahiti Have a Horrible Story to Tell.

Sugar Men Form a Combination With the Object of Fighting the Trust.

Democrats Gathering at New York to Formally Notify Their Candidates.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 20—At least two of those who sailed from Drake's Bay, in the ill-fated brig Tahiti, were saved, if the story told by Leon Martelle is true. Martelle has arrived in this city from San Diego and says he spent several months in and around Manzella, and only left there two months ago. Last April while up the coast about 60 miles from Manzella he was told about a couple of shipwrecked men who had been cast ashore near there and he went to see them. One of the men was a Russian Finn named Johansen, and the other a Gilbert Islander. The men told him they were on board the Tahiti when she capsized and with four others they managed to make their escape in a small boat. The brig capsized in a heavy squall at night, and was bottom up inside of five minutes after the squall struck he. The boat in which Johansen claimed to have escaped was on top of the house and floated off when the brig capsized. Johansen says he was on deck at the time and sprang for the boat as the vessel went over. Four others, a woman and three men, all Gilbert Islanders, climbed into the boat. They had neither food nor water and only three oars. When daylight came they were out of sight of the brig and thought she had gone down. Johansen says the brig upset on the night of October 10th, and they were in the boat until the 25th when they drifted ashore not far from where Martelle says he saw them. On the fourth day after leaving the brig, the woman died and the rest of the party were forced to eat portions of her body to keep alive. Several heavy showers of rain fell, but did them little good, as what fell in the boat or was caught in their clothes was mixed up with spray that constantly flowed over them, and was of no use to quench their thirst. After the storm abated the sun came out and beat down on the unfortunate castaways with terrible force, and they suffered terrible tortures from thirst The tenth day one of the islanders took to drinking salt water and soon went raving mad and ended his sufferings by plunging into the sea. They had no idea in what direction they were drifting and during the entire time they were in the boat not a single sail was sighted. Another of the Islanders took sick on the 12th day and died two days after. The body was cast overboard and two survivors lay in the little craft waiting for death. It rained heavily that night and the little boat was soon half full of water and the two men drank until it seemed they would burst. When daylight came the remains of the woman's body was thrown overboard as the stench became unbearable. On the morning of the 26th the boat was cast ashore and the two men crawled out of her and lay down on the beach. They were carried to the huts of some fishermen near by and it was there they were found by Martelle.

To Fight the Sugar Trust.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., July 20.—Juan Romero, representative of a syndicate of Cuban sugar planters, has been in the city since last week conferring with several prominent capitalists and sugar men with a view to forming a large sugar house, with what success it is not known, as he declined not only to discuss that question, but also to divulge the names of the parties with whom he was in consultation. When asked for the cause of his reticence, he replied that matters were not in shape to be given to the public, and he withheld the names at the request of the owners. "Some of them," he continued, "are in the sugar business, and they do not consider it policy to reveal their connection with a new concern at this time. "Why, you can surmise when you understand the grip the American Sugar Trust has upon the wholesalers of your country. I can say this, however, my visit to Philadelphia has not been without some success. In fact, I may say I feel greatly encouraged, both as to financial aid and co-operation."

HAVANA, July 20.—It is stated that several American capitalists have formed a syndicate for the purpose of starting a large central sugar establishment near Trinidad.

The Democratic Candidates.

NEW YORK, July 20.—The principal hotels are well filled with Democrats of national repute from all sections of the country, who will participate in the reception to-night to Grover Cleveland and Adlai Stevenson upon the occasion of their official notification of their nomination as the Democratic candidates for President and vice-President. Both of the candidates are in town. The meeting will be held this evening at Madison Square Garden, as it is Mr. Cleveland's desire that his response be listened to by a large number of people. Afterwards the meeting of the National Democratic Committee will be held at the Fifth Avenue Hotel for the election of officers and the organization of the committee for the campaign. The speech of notification will be made by Congressman William L. Wilson of West Virginia, who was chairman of the National Convention, and who is also chairman of the committee on notification. The committee will consider the proposition to establish western headquarters at Chicago, with a working force in charge to be supplied with campaign literature and funds, and to have any number of speakers at its disposal.

Rockefeller's Daughter.

CHICAGO, July 20—The Rev. L. A. Crandall refuses to make any statement concerning the romantic story that he was forced to leave Cleveland owing to a love affair between himself and Miss Alla Rockefeller, daughter of John D. Rockefeller, the Standard oil magnate. Miss Rockefeller is 22 years old. Dr. Crandall's wife died two years ago. He has two grown children and is 48 years of age. He had arranged for a marriage with Miss Rockefeller, but when the subject was broached to her father he became indignant and told the clergyman he must resign or the Rockefellers would withdraw. Dr. Crandall resigned. He came here three weeks ago and took charge of the Memorial church. He was seen by a reporter yesterday and said: "I have absolutely nothing to say to the papers. This matter is not the business of the public." Miss Rockefeller is the second daughter of Mr. Rockefeller, and it is said the disparity in ages added to the ire of the girl's father when the news of the proposal of marriage came to him.

THE HABEAS CORPUS

Argued To-day at Westminster—The Decision Reserved.

NEW WESTMINSTER, July 20.—At an adjourned session to-day, on the habeas corpus case of Geo. Bowick, a passenger on the Yosemite, detained by the city of Vancouver in quarantine in that city, Solicitor Hammersley of Vancouver, produced further affidavits from Health Officer Huntley and Mayor Cope, to prove that the Sound cities had quarantined against B. C. Mr. Davies for Bowick argued that it was not what the States did, but what Vancouver had a right to do. He alleged that the smallpox regulations suppressed the city by-law. Hamersley contended that the regulations were a general act, and the by-law being a private act stood before the court as law. Judge McCreight reserved his decision.

FROM VANCOUVER.

No New Cases—The Contempt of Court—Dr. McGuigan's Appointment.

VANCOUVER, July 20.—No new cases of smallpox to-day.

DISCIPLES OF BELLAMY.

The Organ of the English Trades Unions Calls for an Industrial Change.

Troops to Remain at Homestead Until the Troubles are Completely Settled.

The Population of Poland Mark the Anniversary of their Country's Downfall.

LONDON, July 20. — Referring to the Homestead troubles, the Times and Echo, the leading organ of the Trades Unionists and working classes generally, says that the only remedy for the present condition of affairs throughout the labor world is the substitution of national corporations for capitalistic competition. Mere private combinations between the employers on one hand, and trades unions of workmen on the other, will never do any real good. They have done some good, trades unions especially, but at their best they are but armed bodies waging war, and all war is immoral, wasteful and pernicious. There must be in the near future, national co-operation for the acquisition, development and direction of all industry in which only workers shall have part and share, and in which there shall be no temptation to make unfair profits, because all profits will be shared by the workers alike. Competition, it says, is crushing the life out of labor, and yet, strangely enough, the employers grow richer and richer, and praise competition as full of all sorts of blessings. The paper goes on in this radical strain: "Competition has long ceased to be a struggle for the survival of the fittest; it is now simply a battle of the strongest and most unscrupulous, and in this battle those who are the most reckless in their adulterations, in their misrepresentation to buyers, in oppression of their workmen, in their fraudulent appropriation of capital, must win if they have ordinary business ability and energy. They do win—everywhere. There is little or no honest trading left in England to-day. There is little or no honest work done, because the employer has so thoroughly handicapped the worker, so thoroughly taught him the art of making things seem what is wanted and not to be such, that the art of doing really honest work is half-forgotten. Meanwhile the great capitalists grow richer year by year. The small masters are crushed out everywhere, and so few teachers are left of the arts and crafts. The large employer runs three or four or a dozen businesses, each superintended by managers who are bullied if the yearly rate of profit is not maintained, and who are consequently regardless of every other condition. Pharaoh is in his palace, drowned in the sensual enjoyment of the vast tribute of the slaves he has never seen. The taskmasters are the bond-thrall's only embodyment of true masterhood. If this horrible condition of things continues, and grows in evil intensity, as grow it must, there is no possible end of it all but national decay, preceded probably by fearful scenes of revolutionary violence. What is the remedy?"

At Homestead.

HOMESTEAD, July 20.—Genl. Snowden, commanding the troops gathered in and about Homestead, made this announcement to-day: "I desire to state that the entire division of the national guard now at Homestead will remain here intact until the present difficulties between the Carnegie Company and its employees are adjusted. I have no qualifications to make to this announcement; not one company of this division will be ordered home until a complete settlement is reached; furthermore I desire to officially announce that the first brigade has been ordered to report at once at Homestead.

PITTSBURG, July 20.—Hugh O'Donnell and all other men for whom warrants were issued, have decided to surrender and bondsmen are now being sought. It is possible they may be compelled to remain over one night in jail.

The Downfall of Poland.

NEW YORK, July 20.—A dispatch from St. Petersburg says: During the present week the entire population of Poland will be in mourning, and by religious services and in other ways will manifest its grief at the loss of her independence. Yesterday was the one-hundredth anniversary of the memorable fight of Kosciusko at Dutierka, which was the one great and noble event of the year that promised any real hope for the Poles, and which ended in wavering, weakness, treachery, and finally utter submission. The disasters of that year have never been retrieved, and the spasmodic efforts two years later only resulted in making the subjugation of the nation more complete. And so, for a week, and many of them longer, the women of Poland from duchess to peasant, will wear nothing but black, both in the matter of gowns, millinary and even jewelry. It will be a striking demonstration of the loss of their independence a hundred years ago.

London's Milk Supply.

LONDON, July 20.—An investigation that has been in progress for several months has developed the fact that the milk supply of London and the large towns is yearly becoming more and more a deadly distributor of sickness among all classes. Fully thirty per cent of the total number of milking cows in twenty large towns have been found to be afflicted with tuberculosis, and to this fact is attributed the terrible mortality, especially among children, from tubercular diseases, such as diphtheria and diphtheric sore throat, as well as enteric and scarlet fevers. It is also claimed that much of the milk contains pyrotoxine, a deadly poison discovered some years ago in cheese, and which is most rapid and alarming in its fatal effects especially in the case of children.

WRECKED NEAR LIVERPOOL.

The Crew Saved—A Life Boat Capsized—Two Drowned.

LONDON, July 20.—The British ship Maxwell, from Liverpool to San Francisco, has gone ashore and will probably be a total wreck on the Liverpool bar.

The British bark Maxwell, Capt. Fraser, bound for San Francisco, was yesterday wrecked during the night off New Brighton, where the Mersey enters Liverpool bay. The ship wrecked crew sent up signals of distress and the Liverpool life boat was manned in response to the signals. The life boat crew was unable to get a tug boat, although numbers of tug boats were moored in the river. They appealed to the tug Spendthrift but the captain refused to extend assistance, on the ground that he had been engaged to attend the City of Paris and Alaska then lying in midstream. In the meantime a multitude of people, attracted by the signals, gathered on the shore and many of them cursed in loud tones the inhumanity of all who refused to go to the rescue. Finally an hour passed before a tug boat was obtained and the life boat proceeded on its mission. When the Liverpool life boat neared the wreck it capsized and the crew were thrown into the water. Most of them clung to the bottom of the overturned boat, but two of them were drowned. The life boat was cast ashore at Haylake about seven miles from Birkenhead. Besides the two drowned the three others who made their way to the shore were so badly battered as to be in a dangerous condition. In the meantime the New Brighton life boat was launched and made its way safely to the Mexwell, whose crew had almost despaired of rescue. They were safely taken off, being 29 in number, and after being cared for were sent back to Liverpool.

Homestead Men Charged With Murder.

PITTSBURG, July 19.—This afternoon information was lodged before an alderman charging murder against Hugh O'Donnell, principal leader of the Homestead men; John McLuckie, burgess of Homestead, Sylvester Critchlow, Anthony Flaherty, Samuel Birkett, James Flannagan and Hugh Ross, all labor leaders in the recent Homestead trouble. They are specifically charged with the murder of T. J. Conners and Silas Wayne, Pinkertons, killed in the fight. The information was made by Lovejoy, of the Carnegie company. Constables left at once for Homestead, and are now looking for the men. The news created much excitement among the strikers, as this action was not expected. The attorney for the strikers said to-night that no information would be made against Frick, Lovejoy and Potter now, and it is possible that no retaliatory measures will be taken by the strikers. If it was decided to take such action the charge would probably be conspiracy. From a source close to Carnegie it was learned that the firm has the names of 215 strikers against whom they believe they have enough evidence to convict as accessories of the murder of the Pinkerton men. It is their intention to enter informations every day until the entire 215 have been arrested. The sheriff's officers failed this afternoon to find those for whom warrants were issued, but this evening all of the accused except O'Donnell, who is out of the state, and McLuckie, who had already given himself up at Pittsburg, assembled at the railway station in Homestead, intending, unaccompanied by officers to voluntarily proceed to Pittsburg to face the charges against them. O'Donnell's wife says the report that he has left town to avoid arrest is untrue, and that he will be back in a few days.

Queer Papers in Asia and Africa.

Some time ago the New York Sun told of a curious newspaper published at the Causeway, Salisbury, South Africa, called the Mashonaland Herald and Zambesian Times. The paper is the size of a sheet of foolscap, and is not printed. The original writing of its contributors is produced by the hektograph process. In noticing and commenting on that George Augustus Sala says he knows of a more curious specimen of newspaper printing that was published in some part of the Deccan, in which excellent lithographic stone was abundant. "The Anglo-Indian publication," he says, "was published every morning, lithographed on a square of white cotton stuff. After being perused it could be utilized as a pocket handkerchief, and in the evening this Journal Mouchoir was returned to the local dhobee or washerman, who, after it had gone through the requisite lavatory processes, returned it to the newspaper office to be reissued to subscribers. Whether there was an edition de luxe, lithographed on French cambric with lace borders for the use of the ladies of that cantonment I am not aware."

Cost of the Homestead Strike.

NEW YORK, July 18.—The Mail and Express' Homestead special says: Both sides agree that there is no immediate prospect of a settlement of the strike, which already has cost considerably more than $1,000,000. Every day the works are idle costs the Carnegie company $5000. It is 20 days since the men went out. The militia has been under orders one week at $20,000 a day cost to the state of Pennsylvania. The cost to the company and the state is piling up at the rate of $70,000 a day. In addition the workmen lose more in wages. The destruction of property has not been great, as the barges burned were inexpensive.

Electricity on a Railway.

WORCESTER, Mass., July 18.—The Gazette says editorially to-night: The New York, New Haven & Hartford road will probably be the first steam road in the world to substitute electricity for steam on a large scale. This road is known to be constructing a four-track line, but it is not known to the public that the two central tracks are to be equipped with special reference to the use of electricity instead of steam to propel both freight and passenger cars over that portion of the line between New York and New Haven, a distance of seventp-four miles. When the plant is ready the distance between the two cities will be covered in sixty minutes.

The steamers will be immediately admitted to American registry and will hereafter fly the American flag, be officered and manned by Americans, and will practically be American ships. Upon Mr. Griscomb's return from England early next month the details of plans for new ships of the style of the City of Paris and City of New York will be completed. The British contracts were only abrogated after the payment of a large sum of money by the International Navigation company.

Balm For Miss Belanger.

SEATTLE, July 19.—Miss Mary Belanger, the Port Townsend beauty whose charms captivated R. H. Craswell, the millionaire rustic of Prince Edward Island, was the subject of sincere congratulations yesterday morning of a host of sympathetic friends when the verdict in her breach of promise case was read before Judge Hanford giving her $10,000 of the $100,000 prayed for in her bill. The jury were all in the accustomed places when the judge scanned the verdict and handed it to the clerk to be read aloud. The plaintiff was more than pleased, as she afterward expressed herself, for the reason that it vindicated her character in the eyes of the world. The defendant rubbed one hand with the other and cracked his knuckles, but submitted. The case had attracted such unusual notice as to be the subject of numerous bets among the male attendants upon the trial who seemed equally divided as to the known result. The main question with the jury was the amount to be awarded for the young lady's blighted affections.

A Physician's Death

NORTHPORT, July 19.—Dr. Charles Scudder, son of the late Hon. Henry J. Scudder, and son-in-law of Senator Adam M. Evarts, killed himself early this morning in the Scudder mansion in a tragic way. For some time Dr. Scudder has been in poor health, and came here yesterday from New York to spend a few weeks for the benefit of his health. It was noticed when he got off the train that he was muttering to himself and making wild gesticulations with his arms. He was quickly ushered into a carriage and driven to the Scudder mansion. He was placed in charge of an attendant, who kept close watch on him all last evening. This morning it was learned that Scudder had escaped from his room. An attendant caught a glimpse of him a short distance from the house and called to him to stop. Scudder turned, and seeing the man approaching, drew a dagger and plunged it into his heart. He sank to the ground and expired instantly. He was 35 years of age and leaves a wife.

Emperor William Shoots a Whale.

STOCKHOLM, July 18.—Advices from the Tromsee state that the German Emperor and his party are deer hunting on the Island of Andamenn. The Emperor shot two bucks and is in fine spirits. Last week he and his party were out whaling with two vessels. The Emperor struck one whale fifty-four feet and another 63 feet long. The Emperor's health has been greatly improved already. His ear is said to have ceased paining him and the nervousness from which he has suffered excessively during his last days in Potsdam has almost vanished. He sleept well for the last ten days, having been entirely free from insomnia. He devotes about an hour and a half daily in dictating dispatches to Count Caprivi and reading letters and telegrams from Berlin. All the rest of his time between 8 and 10 is occupied with hunting, or preparations for hunting and other sports. Last Sunday the Emperor read divine service before the imperial party and the attendants it has attached to it since reaching Norway.

A COWBOY PREACHER.

His Sermon on the Homestead Troubles Causes War in His Congregation.

CRAWFORDSVILLE, Ind., July 20.—There has been trouble among members of the Universalist congregation at Whitesville for several days. There were two factions in the church and great excitement prevailed, with fisticuff combats, till yesterday, when an armed up battle took place in court, the minister, Rev. Thomas Jacobs, taking his own part with considerable success. The trouble arose over a sermon Mr. Jacobs, who is a converted cowboy and prize fighter from Arizona, and is very pronounced in the expression of his views, preached on the Homestead strike. He was very eloquent in upholding the action of the locked out mill men. Many members of his congregation differed with him, and forced him to vacate his pulpit. The minister brought suit for salary due to the amount of $7 and for possession of the church. He still had a number of friends in his congregation, but they were quite mild in their support, and the majority, principally farmers, declared their preacher was an anarchist and advocated murder and riot. On Monday Rev. Mr. Jacobs was attacked by a member of his church, after a heated argument on the Homestead sermon, and it is said was badly whipped. His friends among the parishioners made an appeal to the sheriff at this city for protection for their pastor. The sheriff sent out a notification that he would send a posse and arrest all the participants in the affair unless peace was declared at once. He finally sent an officer to the scene yesterday to arrest any one who interfered with the minister. The suit for salary brought by the pastor came up in court yesterday afternoon. A great crowd was present, and Rev. Mr. Jacobs incurred the ill will of another parishioner in the courtroom by declaring that he would blacken his eyes if he did not mind his own business. This was a signal for a free fight between the two church factions. The minister's old-time experience in the fisticuff arena stood him in good stead, and he knocked out a couple of his assailants, while his friends finished the rest of his enemies, the single court officer being powerless to act, and standing outside the battle line. After quiet was restored the minister arose and surprised the court by declaring he wished to withdraw the suit. He said he wanted nothing more to do with people who were quarrelling all the time, and that his prize fighting days were over. He said his wife and he intended to leave the place, and asked that he be permitted to walk out of town. His angry parishioners agreed to this, and his friends passed around a hat. The collection was not a very large one. The victorious faction have taken the big padlocks off the church doors, and are now in search of a new pastor. They declare they have had enough of cowboy preachers who were converted late in life, and now want a theologian who has been educated up to preaching all his life.

Catholic Extension in the Orient.

ROME, July 18.—The Latin congregation and the Oriental congregation of the propaganda will shortly be gathered together to discuss the vast project of the pope for an ecclesiastical organisation of the churches in the East. It relates in conjunction with France and Turkey to the re-establishment of the ancient patriarch general of Constantinople, the ancient prelate who has enjoyed the confidence of the sultan and the sympathy of France and Russia. The pope has been occupying himself with this question since 1883.

Lawless Moorish Troops.

TANGIERS, July 18.—Great anxiety prevails among the Christians and Jews here owing to the lawlessness of the Sultan's troops, which have been mobilized to suppress the Angerha rebellion. The soldiers have committed many robberies and murders among the villages near by, and the authorities were unable to guarantee safety for the foreigners.

The Ameer's Perilous Position.

LONDON, July 18.—The Chronicle's Calcutta correspondent says: It is reported that many Afghan tribes refuse to support the Ameer, owing to his exactions and supposed intrigues with Russia. It is stated that if the Ameer's troops are defeated at Angora, a revolt is certain.

Stanley "Rushed" the Constituency.

LONDON, July 18.—General Frazier denies that he resigned the North Lambeth constituency, which he represented in the last parliament, in favor of Henry M. Stanley. He hints that Mr. Stanley "rushed" the constituency.

The chairman further stated that 150 persons were being fed and the suspects should be removed at once. He could not say what the cost of keeping all these people was, and some rate should be fixed, and suggested that the city have some one audit the accounts, so that they could be paid when they came due.

The mayor stated that he had arranged with Mr. Davies that the city should pay all expenses.

Ald. Lovell said the city had never raised any objection to paying any reasonable expense. The city council and the mayor had done their very best and acted as promptly as they could.

Dr. Davie, in rising to speak, asked Mayor Beaven for a copy of a letter which he (Dr. Davie) had written him, making what was intended as a courteous request, but which had been otherwise understood.

Mayor Beaven said the remark in the newspapers had annoyed him much more than the letter. He accepted Dr. Davie's explanation.

Dr. Davie said the letter requested that Dr. Crompton be placed in the Jubilee quarantine station as resident physician, as such a step was necessary. Also that a building for suspectep cases be built. It was in pursuance of his duty in carrying out the regulations that he had made the requests. No notice having been taken of his requests he had acted upon his own responsibility.

The Mayor said he had laid the matter before Dr. Milne, and expected it would be looked after.

Dr. Davie then exonerated the Mayor from all blame.

Dr. Milne then addressed the meeting as follows:

Dr. Milne said he might explain the question in reference to Dr. Crompton. When there were a few cases sent out to the Jubilee station a request came to have Dr. Crompton reside there. At that time there were not more than ten cases in the hospital while we had in the city 25 cases at least. As it was difficult to get a medical man to attend to such cases. Dr. Crompton was the only one available so that it would have been absurd to allow Dr. Crompton to remain permanently at that stage at the Jubilee grounds while there was a much larger number needing attendance in the city; some of them severe at that, as his services were required at night on these cases in the city. But this did not suit the powers that govern the Jubilee hospital station; they must have a man at once to reside in the building. One could easily see that if the mayor acceeded to the request those in the city, at least for a few days, would have no medical attendance until they were all removed to the Jubilee hospital grounds. Then Dr. Crompton would have become the resident physician. This is what was arranged by the mayor, and Dr. Crompton was put on the medical staff, owing to this understanding. In reference to himself he must say that he did not agree with the idea of carrying out clause 4 of the regulations in some instances, as these regulations were made after they had quarantined a large number of houses, and it would be a hardship to many to be put in quarantine again for 14 days when their time had nearly been completed. He fully concurred in the rule as it stands, and can now be carried out but as they had no building to isolate those who had been contaminated, in fact were met with opposition on every hand in the attempt to get a building erected for the smallpox cases themselves, the matter of an isolated building was still further delayed on this account.

Dr. Davie in reply said that his orders were imperative, but Dr. Milne did not believe in section 4 of the regulations and Dr. Davie did, and hence the whole trouble. It was not to be supposed that he (the speaker) was such an infernal jackass as to send Jubilee Hospital nurses into the smallpox ward if there was any danger in doing so. Personally he thought highly of Dr. Milne, but the dispute between them was a purely professional one as to the proper treatment of the cases. He proposed to carry out his instructions to the letter.

Ald. Lovell spoke eloquently in defence of Dr. Milne and Mayor Beaven.

Premier Davie in the course of a lengthy speech explained why Dr. Milne had been doposed.

Dr. Davie said that when he discovered that the Mayor was paying more attention to what Dr. Milne said than to what Dr. Davie said, he quickly made up his mind that Dr. Milne must go.

The meeting adjourned at 11:30.

ABOUT THE CHINESE.

The Catholic Prelates and Ottawa Officialdom Hold Different Views.

MONTREAL, July 15.—The Canadian Government authorities are considerably alarmed at a story of an attack made by Bishop Lafleche of Three Rivers, one of the most prominent of the Roman Catholic prelates in Canada, on the Chinese of British Columbia.

Bishop Lafleche recently accompanied a number of other Canadian bishops on a tour to the Pacific coast, and on his return published his impressions, in which he said of the Chinese: "A great many people I met in the West regarded the invasion by the Chinese as a menance to the Northwest. China has a population of 450,000,000, more than the population of all Europe. This population is ingenious, hard-working and economical. The Chinese live on nothing, and have an appetite for work against which the whites cannot fight.

"I saw in New Westminster a large shop, kept by a Chinese, containing exclusively Chinese merchandise. It is easy to see how important the immigration of such a people is to the white. The Chinese who come save all they can and send all their money to their own country. There is in China a powerful company of capitalists which advances the money to poor Chinamen to carry thom to America. These imports reimburse the company by monthly or weekly payments and send the balance of their earnings home.

"Bishop Brondel told me, in speaking of a little town in the West, that the savings of the Chinese there are $1000 a week or $50,000 a year, every cent of which is religiously sent to China. This race plays a disastrous role. It brings to the country no industry that adds to its property, but on the contrary it competes ruinously with the whites, and sends out of the country a considerable quantity of capital that we really want to develop our national industries.

"I have found a considerable number of people who approve of the American policy of Chinese exclusion. Here the Government imposes a tax of $50 on each Chinaman who comes, but that is not sufficient to prevent the children of the Celestial Empire from joining us."

The views expressed by the Bishop of Three Rivers are shared in by his brother prelates, and an effort is being made to force the Government to legislate against the Chinese. The Government, however, is not favorable to the idea and a conflict of opinion has arisen. Mr. Parmalee, commissioner of Customs, whose department keeps track of Chinese immigration, has been instructed to prepare a report of the number now in the country.

He states that there were 15,000 Chinese in Canada on the completion of the Canadian Pacific Railway, and up to last year the returns to China were in excess of the arrivals, so that up to 1891 there was an annual decrease in the Chinese population. An official return dated May, 1892, issued by the Hongkong authorities, shows that this ratio has been reversed, and for the past thirteen months the shipments to Canada of Chinese exceeded the arrivals back. During 1891 there were 3,008 Chinese cleared from Hongkong for British Columbia, and only 1,907 arrived back in Hongkong from Canada, and, of course, some of these latter only returned temporarily on certificates. This large increase in the Chinese immigration into Canada is attributed to the exclusion laws of the United States.

Mr. Parmalee does not share any of the apprehensions expressed by the Bishop of Three Rivers. He has been out in British Columbia two or three times, and being a shrewd observer, formed opinions on the subject. These are favorable to the Chinese. He looks upon them as sober, quiet, industrious citizens, whose labor is indispensable to the people of British Columbia. "Why," says the Commissioner, "the people of the Pacific slope, from Mexico to Alaska, could not exist two weeks without the Chinese. They cultivate the vineyard and the farms, the market gardens and the fisheries, and in great part, the mines and mills, not to speak of domestic labor. Without the labor of the Chinese it is evident there would be a famine in British Columbia and a crash."

The Commissioner, like the late Sir John Macdonald, does not believe in harassing the Chinese or imposing upon them unnecessary restrictions. He looks forward, as the Premier did, to the cultivation of an immense trade with China, whose ruling spirits are becoming more and more enlightened and in extending commerce with the world. Canada is in a very favorable position for obtaining a share of these 450,000,000 of Chinese, and as Mr. Parmalee says, if Canada can only manage to sell them goods to the value of 20 cents a head, the return trade would equal that amount, and the total trade would thus exceed Canada's present trade with the whole world.

Lactated Food Brings Life, Health and Strength.

Lactated Food has been the means of saving the lives of thousands of infants and young children, who had previously been fed on cow's milk and the common prepared foods of the day. Children, who were not nourished by Lactated Food, were reduced to mere skeletons by cholera infantum and dysentery; but as soon as the life-restoring Lactated Food was fed, a new life seemed to dawn, and the infant quickly recovered.

Mrs. Samuel McCool, of Londesboro, Ont., writes as follows:—

"I have a little boy, twenty-two months' old, whom the doctor gave up. We tried a prepared food, but it did not agree with him. We next tried your Lactated Food, with the result that he is now the picture of health and strength. He has already used six dollars worth of your Lactated Food. I would recommend it for all delicate and weak babies."

Murderer Hinchey Dying.

TACOMA, July 18.—Tom Hinchey, who while drunk murdered Tax Collector Martin, is dying from consumption. To-day he was ordered removed from the county jail cell to an upper bedroom, where his mother, who has arrived from Canada, will nurse him. Still it is feared he cannot survive any great length of time. He is held here in jail on an appeal from Judge Allyn's decision, sentencing him to prison for twenty years.

DR. MILNE'S "SUSPENSION."

Premier Davie and Dr. Davie have now made known the reasons for their summary and arbitrary proceedings against Dr. Milne. The latter's views are also placed before the public in the interview given elsewhere, and the people of Victoria can judge between him and the provincial authorities. Dr. Davie's statement of the case at last night's meeting was that he insisted on the strict enforcement of the regulations recently promulgated by the Government, that Dr. Milne failed to secure such strict enforcement, and that the Government therefore suspended Dr. Milne at his instance. As will be seen from Dr. Milne's explanation, this broad generalisation does him an injustice. He believes in the enforcement of the health regulations, but he at the same time insists on the exercise of some discrimination in carrying them out, whereas Dr. Davie commands that they be enforced with a sort of wooden rigidity.

Coming to particulars, there seems to be two counts in Mr. Davie's indictment against the City Health Officer. One of these is that Dr. Crompton was not required to give his whole time to the patients at the Jubilee quarantine hospital when Dr. Davie commanded that this should be done. Dr. Milne's answer is that there were at that time but few patients in the hospital, while there were a good many in the city awaiting removal which demanded medical attention. Dr. Crompton was quite capable of attending to all, and his remaining at the hospital would have left some at least of the outside cases without attendance. Under such circumstances common sense would seem to have called for a modification of the rule requiring a special attendant in the hospital, or its suspension until all the patients were removed. However, Dr. Richardson was placed in charge at the hospital, and this question seemed at that time to have been settled, so that it cannot well be advanced as a cause of the Government's action.

The most serious difference has been with reference to the enforcement of rule 4, which requires all "suspects" to be placed in a separate building. Dr. Davie says that all persons who have been exposed to contagion must be taken to the building at Ross Bay, without any regard to surrounding circumstances. Dr. Milne says those persons recently exposed should be so removed, but all those who have been quarantined in other buildings for anywhere near the prescribed fourteen days should not be removed. He instances Mrs. Waitt, the people in the Clarence Hotel and others, whose fourteen days of quarantine are nearly up. If they are now removed to Ross Bay along with more recent suspects, they will be exposed to fresh contagion. Anyone can see that the strict enforcement of the rule would require them to be kept there for another 14 days, which would be unjust to them. Dr. Davie, we believe says they can be released at the end of the original 14 days, which means that they will go out fresh from contact with the new "suspects". Dr. Milne is evidently right when he contends that there would be much greater danger to the public from this plan of proceeding than if the old "suspects" are detained in their present quarantine until the 14 days are up, which will, in most instances, mean only a day or two longer. Medical opinion and public opinion both will support Dr. Milne's contention. Moreover, we learn from the Vancouver papers that the strict enforcement of the rule has not been insisted on there. It does not appear that Dr. Davie pays any attention to this; possibly it is because he has no time to spare from Victoria.

There can be no honest or sensible conclusion from the whole history of this affair except that the Provincial Health Officer and the Government at his instance have acted in a tyrannical, unfair and absurd manner. They seem to have been prepared to deal with wooden automata instead of men endowed with discretion and common sense.

GLADSTONE'S WORK.

The elections are over and Gladstone has triumphed, though his victory is not so decisive as he and his friends wished and expected. A majority of 42 in a House of 670 is certainly small; it barely comes up to the recognized standard of a "working majority," and it moreover contains uncertain elements in the Parnellites and Labor men. In such circumstances it is not unnatural to find certain wiseacres refusing to believe that Mr. Gladstone will be able to carry out his programme in the new Parliament. These people also place a great deal of dependence on the House of Lords as an obstructive and destructive body. But it is likely that some or all of these difficulties will vanish very quickly from the new Government's path. It must be assumed that the Parnellite members, though they have displayed none too much good sense in the past, will not be so foolish as to stand in the way of legislation for Ireland, for which they are supposed to be fighting. Neither are the purely labor representatives likely to work into the hands of the Tory party, unless, indeed, they secure some quid pro quo from the latter in the way of promises of special legislation. This must be a very remote contingency. As to the House of Lords, it seems safe to predict that if it should place itself in direct antagonism to the popular body it will be entering upon a losing fight, and may endanger its own existence, or at least provoke an irresistible agitation for its reform. The plan which the Liberal leaders have decided to adopt seems likely to be effective. They say that if the Lords reject the Home Rule bill when it is first sent up from the Commons they will not ask for an immediate dissolution, but will proceed with other measures which they deem necessary. Then next session the Home Rule bill will again be sent up to the Lords, who will have the pleasure of throwing it out at least three times if they are as persistent as they promise to be. In the meantime the other portions of the Liberal programme will be taken up, with every prospect of consolidating the Liberal party and gaining new strength. That there is plenty of work outside of Irish legislation is shown in the following summary of the platform laid down at the great Newcastle convention:—

1. Home Rule in Ireland.
2. Disestablishment and Disendowment of the Church of England in Wales.
3. London Reforms.
4. Free Schools with public control.
5. Registration and Electoral Reforms—"One Man, One Vote."
6. Short Parliaments.
7. Rural Reforms.
8. Land Law Reforms, with Leasehold Enfranchisement.
9. Direct Popular Veto on the Liquor Traffic.
10. Disestablishment and Disendowment of the Church of Scotland.
11. Equalization of Death Duties.
12. Just Division of rates between Owner and Occupier.
13. Taxation of Mining Royalties.
14. A Free Breakfast Table.
15. Extension of the Factory Acts.
16. "Mending or Ending" of the House of Lords.

This line of procedure will very likely upset the calculations of the Tories, who have been expecting a dissolution and new election immediately after the first rejection of the Home Rule bill by the Lords. They, as well as the Liberals, know that the latter are likely to get fresh support by means of their promised legislation on other than Irish matters, and that the advantages of delay will be all on the side of the new Government. Parliament is to meet on August 4, so there will not be long to await developments.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The ukase issued by Premier Davie has not removed Dr. Milne from the position of Medical Health Officer for the city of Victoria. The doctor's appointment was made by the city council, whose right to make it is conferred by an act of the Legislature. Dr. Milne will continue to act in that capacity until the council notifies him that his services are no longer required.

Somebody has gone to the trouble of making up a ministry for Mr. Gladstone, and the "slate" has been going the usual rounds of the press. The G.O.M. will no doubt be duly grateful for the assistance, but he will be slightly troubled by the failure to find a place for Sir William Harcourt. That gentleman has been very prominent in the Liberal ranks, and the cabinet builders might have been kind enough to find an office for him.

One rumor going about is that Lord Stanley of Preston will resign the Governor-Generalship of Canada on account of the defeat of the Salisbury Government. It is probably without good foundation, for there does not seem to be any particular reason for such a step, unless Lord Stanley has grown tired of the post. Another story is that the Earl of Aberdeen will be Lord Stanley's successor, and this is a more likely rumor than the first. The Earl would prove a most acceptable Governor-General to Canadians, the great majority of whom entertain sincere admiration for him and for his noble wife.

IN HONOR OF VICTORIA.

The N. P. R. Steamship Company Name Their First Steamer After This City.

The Victoria Now on Her Way From Glasgow to This Port Thoroughly Remodeled.

When the agent of the Northern Pacific Steamship Company said that Victorians would not know the steamer Parthia after she came out of the hands of the Glasgow shipbuilders, he meant it. The Parthia, or as she is now known the Victoria, having been re-named in honor of this city, left Glascow on the 8th of July, and is due here early in September.

The local agents of the company, Messrs. R. P. Rithet Co., Limited, received a letter last evening from Dodwell, Carlyle & Co., the general agents for the company, stating that the Parthia had been remodeled and re-christened the Victoria. She was in the dry dock for a couple of months undergoing some wonderful alterations that will make her one of the most commodious passenger steamships on the Pacific. Large steel cabins have been built on the deck and the Victoria is a very different looking steamer to what the Parthia was. The company spared no expense to make the Victoria a first-class steamship, and when the steamer becomes well known she is sure to carry her share of first-class passengers to and from the Orient.

The Victoria is a steel steamship of 3167 tons register. Before she was remodeled she made the trip across the Pacific in 12 days, but in her present condition she is expected to lessen that time. She is due here early in September, and it is probable that the Mayor and Council, on behalf of the citizens, will do something to show their appreciation of the company's action in naming the first of their line of first-class steamships after this city.

The company have come to stay and therefore it will be necessary to have more than one first-class steamer, their other boats being used for freight and Asiatic passengers. When Mr. Dodwell was in the city he stated that the company would shortly provide other boats in addition to the Victoria, and as soon as she has been fairly started on the route they will commence to get other boats to help her handle the business.

The steamship Devawonse, of the same line, left Yokohama to-day and it is due here about the 4th of August.

The Care of Sick Children.

The young mother who is far from a physician may remember for her comfort that a child very seldom really requires medicine. What it needs is what she can give without danger—proper food, pure air, cleanliness and rest. Most of the disorders of children, particularly of infants, arise from some derangement of the digestive tract. The food is not of proper quantity or quality. It is not assimilated; that is, taken up by the blood for the nourishment of the tissues, and the child suffers. It is pale and fretful, throws up its food in undigested masses and does not thrive as a healthy child should. The first thing to be done is to change the food. Add a tablespoonful of limewater to each six of food; if this does not succeed, try using one-fourth cream instead of all milk with water. Vary the strength of the food by adding more or less water. If still unsuccessful, try some of the artificial foods until one is found that does agree with the baby.

With older children an error of diet is very apt to be followed by feverishness and restlessness. High temperature does not mean as much with children as with grown persons. A child may have a temperature of 103 or 104 degs. at night and yet be comparatively well in the morning. A simple enema of soap and water, given with a syringe such as should be in every household, is the safest way of producing a movement if there is constipation. A child two years old may have half a teaspoonful of spiced sirup of rhubarb or a teaspoonful of liquid citrate of magnesia, if there is reason to think that indigestible food is the cause of the attack. When this acts there will probably be an immediate improvement.—Elizabeth R. Scovil in Ladies' Home Journal.

A Convict on the Tramp.

Many years ago, in one of the cantons of Switzerland, a murderer was sentenced to death, and as the said canton had no hangman of its own the authorities communicated with the executioner of the adjoining state, and asked him how much he charged. The price demanded for the execution of the culprit was 200 florins, which the magistrates considered too high, and offered to pay him 200 francs instead. This offer was flatly refused by the hangman.

A sitting of the magistrates was held at which the following resolution was passed: "We will give the convict 100 francs and set him at liberty so that he may go and get hanged where he likes."—Vademecum fur Juristen.

A Big Improvement.

The fire alarm system has been divided into three circuits; which will increase its efficiency. Formerly if a wire broke the whole system was paralysed; now if a wire breaks out only one of the circuits will be cut off, the others remaining in working order.

Bush Fire.

The chief engineer and a couple of members of the fire department went out to the Fairfield road yesterday with the chemical engine to put out a bush fire, which was getting uncomfortably close to a couple of dwelling houses. Some one set fire to a hornet's nest and left the fire burning.

Piggery Nuisance.

There is a Chinese piggery on the Carey road that is a nuisance in more than one way. In the first place the residents of that locality, claim the buildings are on the public road and besides this the smell from the place makes living in the neighborhood a burden.

At the Police Court.

Patrick H. Trundell was up before Magistrate Macrae this morning charged with the larceny of a bunch of keys, and it was stated by the prosecution that behind the keys was $150 worth of jewelry. The case was remanded for two days, to permit of evidence being secured. Charlie, an Indian, was fined $10 for being drunk.

Appointed a Teacher.

The trustees of the Craigflower school met last evening at the school house for the purpose of appointing a teacher to take the position vacated by the missing Prof. Mulder. A number of applications were received and after due consideration Mr. S. Sheppard, of Yale, was appointed. His duties will commence on the 15th of August.

Presbyterian Synod.

Having failed to get ashore at Vancouver, the Rev. D. MacRae, moderator of the Synod of British Columbia, returned home again last evening. The necessary books and papers were handed to the Rev. E. D. McLaren, with authority to open the Synod this evening and immediately adjourn to a later date for formal opening and necessary business.

Elected Officers.

The newly organized Victoria West Athletic Association met last evening and elected the following officers: Melrose H. Austin, president; J. L. Lismore, vice-president; A. S. Netherby, secretary; W. Kirk, financial secretary; W. S. Fairall, treasurer; S. Lewis, captain: directors, Messrs. Melrose, Dodd, McLellan, Oldershaw and Barnes. The question of building a club house was laid over until the next meeting.

Two Sealers Arrive.

The schooner Aiknoka arrived in the harbor last evening from the north with 1238 skins, 750 of which were taken by her crew, 182 by the Walter L. Rich and 306 by the Theresa. The Aiknoka was warned not to enter the sea by the Adams, and having an Indian crew she had to come home. The schooner Mattie T. Dwyer, of San Francisco, also arrived last evening. She has been out since February 27th and although she has already been up to Copper island she has but 600 skins. On May 23rd while off Kurile island two boats were lost and have not been seen since. It is expected that one was picked up by an ocean steamer and taken to San Francisco. The other, no doubt, also reached land safely.

Brantford Ladies' College.

By reference to our advertising columns, it will be seen that the college year of this, the oldest established and most numerously attended Presbyterian college in the east, re-opens Sept. 7th. The success of British Columbia students in attendance last year at Brantford assures Presbyterian families in Vancouver and Victoria that the advantages of this institution are unsurpassed. Colleges, styled "Presbyterian" that are not recognized by the general assembly, but are purely private schools, are not to be compared with the Brantford College for scholarship and thorough training. Parents in selecting an eastern college for their daughters can make no mistake in choosing the Brantford, which has Principal Cavan, the moderator of the general assembly, for its visitor, Dr. Cochrane as governor and Mrs. Rolls as lady principal.

Broke an Axle.

Gus Webber, while driving along Government street this afternoon had the misfortune to break an axle of his hack. He was driving slowly and no other damage resulted from the break, which was soon repaired.

The Yosemite at Vancouver.

The steamer Yosemite was not allowed to land her passengers at the Vancouver wharf yesterday. As there was the usual deluge of plashing rain falling none of the passengers were particularly sorry. On the dock were many of the notables of the Terminal City, among whom were noted a celebrated manufacturer of literary hot shot, wearing a Scotch cap and a sardonic grin, the latter at the discomfiture of the Victorians. The following after an hour's delay decided to try their luck with the quarantine officers of Vancouver, and marched in a sort of phalaux down the plank and up the wharf: J. H. Morrison, Hugh Rennie, M. Cooper and T. W. Lang, the last named said to be a reporter of this city. Three Chinamen followed the white passengers and the whole crowd were promptly arrested and placed in quarantine, where they will remain 14 days at Vancouver's expense. Captain Rudlin was served with a summons commanding him to appear in court at 11 o'clock yesterday morning. The offence alleged is that Captain Rudlin landed passengers at Port Moody. The summons was served too late for Captain Rudlin to obey it.

TO COMMIT FOR CONTEMPT.

Mr. Bodwell Moves in the Matter of Vancouver's City Officials.

In the Supreme Court this afternoon, Mr. Justice Crease presiding, Mr. E. V. Bodwell for the C.P.N. Co. applied for the commitment for contempt of court of Mayor Cope, City Solicitor Hamersley and Health Officer Huntley of Vancouver, it being alleged that those gentlemen had interfered with the landing of passengers from the steamer Yosemite, whereas, the court had issued an injunction restraining them from so doing. Mr. Helmcken appeared with Mr. Bodwell for the company, Hon. E. E. Pooley and Mr. McPhillips appearing for the defendants.

Mr. Bodwell asked who Mr. Pooley appeared for.

Mr. Pooley answered that he appeared for the corporation.

Mr. Bodwell then asked that it be noted that the three gentlemen, Mayor Cope, and Messrs. Hamersley and Huntley were not represented.

Mr. Justice Crease decided that he could not recognize an appearance for the corporation as an appearance for the three individuals. He must have an understanding now, whether Mr. Pooley appeared for the individuals or the corporation.

Mr. Pooley said he would therefore appear for the individuals.

Mr. Crease said he had been very careful in making the injunction so that no one could have any excuse for breaking the law. If this should be brought home he intended to vindicate the right of the court and justice and keep good order throughout the land. He had never heard since he had been in the colony, of an order of the court being disobeyed and he hoped that in this case it had not been disobeyed.

Mr. Pooley asked for an adjournment but as he would not guarantee the personal appearance of the defendants the hearing of the case was continued and was not finished at the time of going to press.

TUNDELL IN TROUBLE.

His Mistress' Lost Jewelry Found Where He Evidently Hid It.

Patrick H. Tundell is in trouble and in limbo, over a love affair which could not be expected to run smoothly, to say the least. For some two or three months Tundell has been employed as night cook at the Washington restaurant, and during the same time has been living a quasi-married life with Martha Lee, rooming at the Cosmopolitan Hotel.

For some short time past it seems that the woman concerned in the case has been endeavoring to free herself from Tundell, and probably secure some more congenial companion. Of course Tundell's jealousy was aroused, and the result may prove disastrous to him. Last night Martha Lee went out for a walk, and when she returned to her room (the room previously occupied by her and Tundell) she found that her keys were missing and that she had been robbed of a quantity of jewellery left in her trunk. She at once suspected Tundell and had him arrested. He protested his innocence but intimated that if his mistress would not lay any information against him he would tell where the missing articles were. Officer Cameron who made the arrest noticed the prisoner throw something away, which proved to be Martha Lee's keys.

To-day after Tundell was remanded at the police court, Sergeant Walker indirectly received information from him that the lost jewelry was hidden in the yard at the rear of the Washington restaurant. Acting on this information the sergeant made a search and discovered the jewelry in a cigar box, concealed beneath a packing case in the yard referred to. The box contained two rings, a gold locket and chain, two pair of ear rings, pair of bracelets, a gold and silver brooch, and a jeweled brooch, valued at about $150.

Last night Tundell told his employer, Mr. Johnson, he was "broke," and was given $5. When he was arrested, however, $58 worth of gold was found on his person. His case will be heard on Friday.

The World Enriched.

The facilities of the present day for the production of everything that will conduce to the material welfare and comfort of mankind are almost unlimited and when Syrup of Figs was first produced the world was enriched with the only perfect laxative known, as it is the only remedy which is truly pleasing and refreshing to the taste and prompt and effectual to cleanse the system gently in the Spring time or, in fact, at any time and the better it is known the more popular it becomes.

THE REPORT FOR TO-DAY.

No New Cases—Two Deaths Occurred at the Jubilee Station Last Night.

Dr. Milne Justifies the Position He Has Taken in Regard to Quarantine.

A reporter of the TIMES called this morning on Dr. Milne. He said that he fully expected, owing to the Attorney-General and Dr. Davie endeavoring to follow the regulations which have been recently issued to the letter, that some difficulties would arise. These rules were issued some time after the outbreak of the disease here, and to enforce them now would cause a hardship in several instances. In his opinion it would not improve the sanitary condition of those affected, nor would it be safe for the public at large. Clause No. 4 of the new regulations reads as follows:—

"4. The Municipal Health Officer shall further place, in another building or tent which shall be provided by the Local Board of Health, all persons (other than nurses and necessary attendants upon the infected persons) who may have been exposed to contagion, and shall supply them with all necessaries until the period of incubation of the disease shall have elapsed, and no such person shall go, or be permitted to go, abroad until he has given satisfactory proof of successful vaccination within the preceding seven years, or shall have obtained a medical certificate of insusceptibility to the vaccine disease, nor until the clothing or effects worn or carried by him have been properly disinfected, if the same have been exposed to contagion."

Several families have been vaccinated and quarantined, and the houses in which they lived properly fumigated. It would be in my opinion because we have now a building for suspects, unfair and improper to expose them with others who have been recently living with and attending to smallpox cases. This is where I differ with Dr. Davie, and I have stated time and again to him, both by speech and in writing, that we could put those who had been recently exposed to the disease in the Ross Bay building; but to ask those who have been eight to thirteen days in quarantine to be placed with those who have come from houses where the disease has been of the most virulent type is unjust and unsanitary. I say unjust, as the following letter to Dr. Davie will show:—

July 17, 1892.

Dr. J. C. Davie:

DEAR SIR—In reply to yours in reference to the suspected cases, the Ross Bay building is now vacated and ready for them. I wrote you last night that Dr. Richardson considered that those under his care as "suspects" had only a few days to remain and that he could manage them very well where they are. If it is so desired they can be removed to the Ross Bay building at once. As to those who have been in attendance and are living in the various houses which are quarantined in the city, discrimination will have to be made, as it would be decidedly unfair and wrong to put those who have been quarantined for ten or twelve days among those who have recently been attending on or living with the sick. Take for example the case of Mrs. Waitt, who has been quarantined for a period of about twelve days. To be placed with those who have just left an infected house would necessitate in her case an additional 14 days' quarantine.

There are, as you know, a large number of houses fumigated and quarantined for a number of days. It would overthrow all these precautions to place inmates of these houses with those exposed more recently. It would be well to have those who have been in attendance recently on the sick, sent to the building at Ross Bay station, but we should discriminate as to the circumstances of the case. Yours respectfully,

G. L. MILNE,
Health Officer.

"Take another example. There are a number of people quarantined in the Clarence Hotel, who have about run their term of quarantine, some of whom have not been much exposed to the disease. If the order is carried out, it would necessitate these people to be quarantined with the suspects at Ross Bay station. I cousider it unfair to them to be again exposed to the disease, which would necessarily be the case.

"Dr. Davie would allow these people out in two days after admittance. Anyone can see how absurd such a course would be, because these people have never been exposed to smallpox to the degree they would be at the Ross Bay station, and they might readily contract the disease there. I maintain that in order that the public should be protected, if these people are placed at Ross Bay, they should remain 14 days longer. Any other course would make our quarantine regulations a farce. Far better allow them to remain where they are and carry out strictly the sanitary measures so far proceeded with."

Nine Points of the Law.

Dr. Milne stated to a TIMES reporter this morning in reply to a question as to whether he was still city medical health officer: "Yes, I'm still the medical health officer of Victoria city. I will take my directions from the city council of Victoria, who appointed me by their own by-law. When they say my services in that capacity are no longer required, I shall step down and out; not till then."

"Have you returned any reply to the Provincial Government's order?"

"I have not. I don't propose to take any notice of their order until I hear from my superiors, the city council."

"Will you issue a bulletin to-day?"

"Yes, the business of the city health office will be carried on precisely as before and I shall issue another bulletin this afternoon."

Health Officer's Bulletin.

There has been no change since yesterday. Two deaths occurred at Jubilee quarantine station last night those of Messrs. Sprung and Jessop. Seven suspects were removed to Ross Bay station last evening. At both quarantine stations the majority of the patients are doing well, there being a few severe cases. I fail to see how the provincial government's health representatives can carry out the regulations they have laid down for themselves. They are quite impracticable.

G. L. MILNE,
Health Officer.

An Encouraging Outlook.

Dr. Milne, city medical health officer, received the following telegraphic dispatch from Hon. J. C. McLagan of the World this morning. "Give date of notice issued by you to Captain Irving forbidding the landing of Vancouver freight. Outlook here encouraging. J. C. McLagan."

Dr. Milne forwarded the necessary information to The McLagan. He does not know whether Mr. McLagan meant by the last sentence that it had stopped raining at Vancouver or that there was a probability of the quarantine being raised.

Dr. Davie's Repoat.

Midnight, July 19, 1892.

NANAIMO—No cases in city or district.

NEW WESTMINSTER—Two cases in city and two in district.

VANCOUVER—No new cases, no deaths; seven cases under treatment in city.

VICTORIA—There are 55 cases, as follows: Albert Head quarantine station, 12; Jubilee quarantine hospital, 43; Victoria city proper, no cases.

There have been two deaths, viz: Mr. Jessop and Mr. Sprung.

One new case developed in the city of Victoria to-day. The patient was immediately removed to the Jubilee quarantine station.

Dr. Milne's appointment as Municipal Health Officer having ceased under the order in council, published 19th inst., it became my duty to appoint a medical man to perform the duties of that position. I, therefore, appointed Dr. Wade "Local Health Officer," for the City of Victoria. Under his supervision the "suspects" are being removed to the Ross Bay Station, and the infected premises from which cases of smallpox have been taken within the city thoroughly disinfected.

J. C. DAVIE, M. D.,
Provincial Health Officer.

Information Given.

United States Consul Myers yesterday received the following telegram from Tacoma:

TACOMA, Wash., July 19, 1892.

Hon. Levi W. Myers:

Kindly mail me exact information of smallpox conditions in Victoria and vicinity.

J. R. YOCUM,
Health Officer of Tacoma.

Mr. Myers replied as follows:

CONSULATE OF THE UNITED STATES.
VICTORIA, B. C., July 20, 1892.

J. R. Yocum, Health Officer, Tacoma, Washington:

SIR,—Your telegram of yesterday came to me this forenoon and I return reply as follows:

There are now in the city of Victoria 55 cases of smallpox, and all these cases are in the hospital, 13 at Albert Head, 8 miles from the city, and 42 at the Jubilee Hospital grounds. There is not a known case outside of these now in the city. If a case should occur it would be immediately taken to the hospital, which is one and a half miles east of the city.

One new case appeared yesterday, as a case supposed to be smallpox, and the patient was at once taken to the hospital. This is the only new case since last Friday, or in four days. I regard the city as entirely safe from further spread of the disorder, except insolated cases, and I see no reason why your city might not, with perfect safety, raise your quarantine. For all practical purposes the disease has been removed from our citizens and the streets and alleys have been cleaned and disinfected to an extent not attained before in years.

If the condition now existing continues the remainder of this week there should be no reason why traffic should not be resumed with the Sound cities by the first of next week at furthest.

LEVI W. MYERS,
U. S. Consul.

Had Decided Objections.

Dr. Watt received orders from the provincial health authorities to-day to proceed to Russell station and vaccinate every person coming and going on the trains on the E. & N. Dr. Watt did so, and there was a general protest from the passengers. One man and his family going to Nanaimo were put at Russell station, to their intense disgust.

No Tramway Men There.

The superintendent of the Tramway company requests the statement corrected which was made last evening to the effect that two street car conductors were taken out of a boarding house on John street in which the fresh case of smallpox was discovered. The street car men board at another house several doors down the street, and the official who supplied the information got slightly mixed in his facts. The superintendent says the company is taking the greatest care with their conductors and drivers to see that they do not come in contact with any person or persons suspected of having the disease.

The Precautions in the East.

There was no truth in the report that smallpox had broken out among the Indians at Birtle. Winnipeg city council and the Manitoba Government are taking precautions to prevent the introduction of the disease. Calgary reports another case, which has been placed in quarantine with the rest.

Excessive Caution.

One phase of the present scare is peculiar, and shows either a lot of admirable self-denial or else a a lot of lassitude glad of a valid excuse. Many persons spoken to in regard to writing their friends on the Mainland and elsewhere have said that rather than run the risk of spreading the infection, even by the remote chance of a letter or newspaper, they have ceased all correspondence for a while. This is about worthy of hare-hearted Vancouverites.

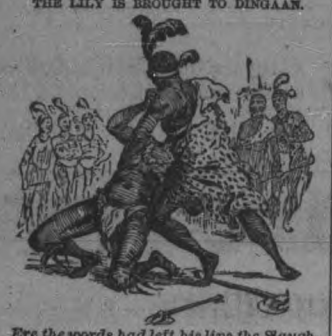
NADA THE LILY.

By H. RIDER HAGGARD.

[Copyright, 1892, by Tillotson & Son and published by special arrangement with them.]

CHAPTER XXVI.

THE LILY IS BROUGHT TO DINGAAN.



Ere the words had left his lips the Slaughterer leaped.

"How are you named?" said Dingaan.

"We are named Bulalio the Slaughterer and Galazi the Wolf, O king," said Umslopogaas.

"Was it thou who didst send a certain message to the Black One who is dead, Bulalio?"

"Yes, O king, I sent a message, but from all I have heard Masilo, my messenger, gave more than the message, for he stabbed the Black One. Masilo had an evil heart."

Now Dingaan winced, for he knew well that he himself and one Umbova had stabbed the Black One, but he thought that this outland chief had not heard that tale, so he said no more of the message.

"How is it that ye dare to come before me armed? Know ye not the rule that he who comes armed before the king dies?"

"We have not heard that rule, O king," said Umslopogaas. "Moreover, there is this to be told—by virtue of the ax I bear I rule alone. If I am seen without the ax then may any man take my place who can, for the ax is chief of the People of the Ax, and he who holds it is the servant."

"A strange law," said Dingaan, "but let it pass. And thou, Wolf, what hast thou to say of that great club of thine?"

"There is this to be told of the club, O king," answered Galazi, "by virtue of the club I guard my life; if I am seen without the club then may any man take my life who can, for the club is my Watcher, not I watcher of the club."

"Never wast thou nearer to the losing of both club and life," said Dingaan angrily.

"It may be so, O king," answered the Wolf. "When the hour is then without a doubt shall the Watcher cease from his watching."

"Ye are a strange pair," quoth Dingaan. "Where have ye been now, and what is your business at the Place of the Elephant?"

"We have been in a far land, O king," answered Umslopogaas. "We have wandered in a far land to search for a flower to be a gift to a king, and in our searching we have trampled a Swazi garden flat, and yonder are some of those who tended it," and he pointed to the captives, "and without are the cattle that plowed it."

"Good! Slaughterer, I see the gardeners and hear the lowing of the cattle, but what of the flower? Where is this flower you went so far to dig in Swazi soil? Was it a lily bloom, perchance?"

"It was a lily bloom, O king, and yet, alas! the lily has withered. Nothing is left but the stalk, white and withered as are the bones of men."

"What meanest thou?" said Dingaan, starting to his feet.

"That the king shall learn," answered Umslopogaas, and turning he spoke a word to the captains who were behind him. Presently the ranks opened up, and from the rear of the companies four men ran forward. On their shoulders they bore a stretcher, and on the stretcher lay something wrapped about with raw ox hides and bound around with rimpis. The men saluted and laid the stretcher before the king.

"Open!" said the Slaughterer, and they opened, and there within the hides, packed in salt, lay the body of a girl who once was tall and fair.

"Here lies the lily stalk, O king," said Umslopogaas, pointing with the ax. "but if her flower blooms on any air it is not here."

Now Dingaan stared.

"Take away this carrion and cast it to the dogs!" he cried. "Take it away, and thou, Slaughterer, tell me now how it came about that the maid was slain. It will be well for thee if thou hast a good answer, for know thy life hangs on the words."

So Umpslopogaas told the king all that tale which had been made ready against the wrath of Dingaan. And when he had finished Galazi told his tale of how he had seen the soldier slay the maid and in his wrath had slain the soldier. Then certain of the captains who had seen the soldier and the maid lying in one death came forward and spoke to it.

Now Dingaan was sorely angered.

"Get you hence, you and your people," he said to the Wolf Brethren. "I take the cattle and the captives. Be thankful that I take not all your lives also—first because ye have dared to make war without my word and secondly because, having made war, ye have so brought it about that though ye bring me the body of her I sought ye do not bring the life."

Now, when the king spoke of taking the lives of all the People of the Ax Umslopogaas smiled grimly and glanced at his companies. Then saluting the king he turned to go. But as he turned a man sprang forward from the ranks and called to Dingaan, saying:

"Is it granted that I may speak the truth before the king and afterward sleep in the king's shadow?"

Now, this was that man who had been captain of the guard of the gate that night when three passed out through the archway and two returned—that man whom Umslopogaas had degraded from his rank.

"Speak on, thou art safe," said Dingaan.

"O king, thy ears have been filled with lies," said the soldier. "Hearken, O king: I was captain of the guard of the gate on that night of the slaying of the Halazi. Three came to the gate of the mountain—they were Bulalio, the Wolf Galazi and another. That other was tall and slim, bearing a shield high, so. As the third passed the gate the kaross he wore brushed against me and slipped aside. Beneath that kaross was no man's breast, O king, but the shape of a woman, well nigh white in color and very fair to see. In drawing back the kaross the third one moved the shield. Behind that shield was no man's face, O king, but the face of a girl lovelier than the moon, and having eyes brighter than the stars. Three went out at the mountain gate, O king; only two returned, and peeping after them methought that I saw the third running swiftly across the plains as a young maid runs, O king. One thing more, king of the world, the best of the captives and the cattle are not here for a gift to thee; they are at the kraal of Bulalio, chief of the People of the Ax. I have spoken, O king—yes, because my heart loves not lies I have spoken the truth, and now do thou protect me from these Wolf Brethren, O king, for they are very fierce."

Now, all the while that the traitor told his tale Umslopogaas inch by inch was edging nearer to him and yet nearer, till at length he might have touched him with an outstretched spear. None noted him save I, Umbova, alone, and perchance Galazi, for all were watching the face of Dingaan.

"Fear not the Wolf Brethren, soldier," gasped Dingaan, rolling his red eyes, "the paw of the Lion guards thee, my servant."

Ere the words had left his lips the Slaughterer leaped. He leaped full on to the traitor, seized him with his hands, and broke him as a child breaks a stick. He broke him, and cast him dead before Dingaan, crying:

"Take thy servant, king. Surely he sleeps in thy shadow!"

Now Dingaan spoke, and his voice came thick with rage.

"Slay him!" he hissed. "Slay the dog and all with him."

"Now we come to a game which I can play," answered Umslopogaas. "Ho! People of the Ax! will you stand to be slaughtered like sheep?"

Then for answer a great shout went up—a shout and a roar of laughter. And this was the shout:

"No, Slaughterer, not so are we minded!" and right and left they faced to meet the foe, while from all along the companies came the crackling sound of shaken shields.

Back sprang Umslopogaas to head his men; forward leaped the soldiers of the king to work the king's will, if so they might. And Galazi the Wolf, he also sprang forward toward Dingaan, and as he sprang swung up the Watcher, crying in a great voice:

"Hold!"

Again there was silence, for men saw that the shadow of the Watcher lay dark upon the head of Dingaan.

"It is a pity that many should die when one will suffice," cried the Wolf again. "Let a blow be struck and where his shadow lies there shall the Watcher be, and lo! the world shall lack a king. A word, king!"

Now Dingaan looked up at the great man who stood above him.

"Begone in peace!" he cried.

"A good word for thee, king," said the Wolf, grinning, and slowly he drew himself backward toward the companies, saying: "Praise the king! The king bids his children go in peace."

But Dingaan would have called to the soldiers to fall upon the People of the Ax. Only I staid him, saying:

"Thy death is in it, O king. The Slaughterer will grind such men as thou hast here beneath his feet, and then once more shall the Watcher look upon thee."

Now Dingaan saw that this was true and gave no command. Still he must have blood, so he turned on me.

"Thou art a traitor, Umbova, as I have known for long, and as yonder dog served his faithless servant so I will serve thee," and he smote at me with the assegai in his hand.

But I saw the stroke and springing high into the air avoided it. Then I turned and fled swiftly as I might, and after me came certain of the People of the Ax. Moreover, they saw me coming, and headed by Umslopogaas, who walked the last of all, ran to meet me. Then the soldiers who followed me hung back out of reach of the ax.

"Here with the king is no place for me any longer, my son," I said to Umslopogaas.

"Fear not, my father; I will find you a place," he answered.

Then I called a message to the soldiers who followed me, saying:

"Tell this to the king, that he has done ill to drive me from him, for I, Umbova, set him on the throne and I alone can hold him there. Tell him this also, that yet worse will he do to seek me where I am, for that day when we are once more face to face shall be his day of death."

Then we marched from the kraal Umgugundhlovu.

This of Dingaan. When he heard my message he once more grew afraid, for he knew me to be no liar.

Therefore it was that for awhile he held his hand, sending no impi to smite Umslopogaas lest perchance it might come about that I should bring him to his death. And before the fear had worn away it happened that his hands were full with the war with the Amaboona because of his slaughter of the white people, and he had no soldiers to spare with whom to wreak vengeance on a petty chief living far away.

A NIGHT IN CAMP.

How the Boys Make Life Happy at the Lacrosse Retreat.

There is a fascination about camp life almost akin to that of jumping off a high bridge. When you get started you can't go back on it, so the boys say who are holding high carnival on the sylvan shores of Victoria Arm. In response to a pressing invitation, a TIMES scribe spent a night at the "Wigwam or Lacrosse Boys' Retreat," and this was the experience: Taking a blanket from the press and a couple of sheets (of paper) the pencil pusher was prepared to make a circle of the globe or a square meal. A three-oared galley, manned by ten sturdy knights of the cross (lacrosse) carried the party to the camp, passing everything along the Arm (all the boats were going the other way). The vocal band on board struck up "ta-ra-ra pass the tea," and after the expenditure of a few euphoneous and appropriate expletives, effected a landing. There seated demurely on the top of a totem pole, and surrounded by flying flags and flickering Oriental lanterns sat "Billy," the brand new bear just imported from Alaska. Though the acknoweledged pet of the camp, Billy's nose was out of joint at this time, for a party of young ladies were there, and seated around the great camp fire presented a bright and pretty picture. They were soon away, however, leaving a quantity of choice edibles at camp, but taking several campers away with them. The fire was heaped higher, sending a shower of sparks heavenward and lighting up the umbrageous avenues leading in every direction through the woods.

Supper was served in inimitable style and the crew and the scribe fared sumptiously and then had to wash the dishes. Around the fire some choice stories were told, songs were sung till the cow bell—not the welkin—rang, when personal experiences were recited, and finally gossip was touched on. One by one the boys moved to their tents and darkness began to take possession of the camp. The fire flickered and threw strange shadows on the tents and there was considerable commotion finding blankets and soft spots to lie on. The fire burned so low that the stars could be seen as if winking at the uncouth objects moving around here and there. There were a few expressive pleadings for more clothes and some one to move his knees a little, then all was quiet save for the heavy, steady breathing and the gentle wash of the rising tide and fitful sounds of unknown origin.

Suddenly some one remembered that the bear was in danger of getting wet and there was a rush to cater to Billy's comfort, but young bruin rushed too, when he came down off his perch and the thoughtful man beat a hasty and undignified retreat and there was confusion and consternation in the camp for a time. The bear was finally tied up and quiet, if not rest, spread her wings over the camp.

After what seemed to be a very short nap everyone was aroused by the dull set tones of the cow bell. Some of the boys tried to get a little more rest, but tried in vain. The scribe and a second had to go for milk and water, and the French cook with a grander name had breakfast ready on the boards in a jiffy.

Then there was a hurrying and a skurrying to get out the boats and a start was made for the city. The Gorge was running like Niagara, and as far as the eye could see great heaps of foam floated around like miniature icebergs. It was rush, a chute, a shower of spray and the turbulent waters below were reached. For 20 yards on either side of the fall the boat could not be seen in the water and the boys were really scared—that they would wear some paint off—for they had a difficult job in making a portage.

WANDERINGS IN CORNWALL.

Wakeman's Roamings Through the Regions Surrounding Penzance. St. Michael's Bay and Mount.

How the Cornish People Catch and Cure Fish—Peculiar Suspicion and Generosity.

PENZANCE, Cornwall, June 25.—Before leaving the ancient Cornish seaport of St. Ives my friendship with the fisherfolk of the town led to the gaining of much interesting information regarding the famous pilcher fishery of the bay.

Brief reference was made in my preceding article to the coming of the shoals, the character of the fish, which is very similar to the diminutive Eastport (Me.) herrings packed as sardines and given French labels in that enterprising Yankee port, and the genuine sardine of Biscayan waters, while mention was made of the curious operations of the "huers" or watchers and the universal excitement in St. Ives when a shoal is sighted.

Seines from 1,000 to 2,000 feet long are used for impounding the shoals. They are carried in a large boat called the seine-boat, worked by from eight to ten men with oars. No sails are used. The seine-boat is attended by two smaller boats called "towboats," which carry smaller nets called thwart or stopnets, while these towboats are followed by still another tender, rowed by strong lads, and used for carrying men between the larger boats or to and from the shore, as circumstances may require.

When the watchers upon the heights signal the order to shoot both the seine-boat and the thwartboat start from the same point. From the former the seine is cast around the fish on the outside, forming a large segment of a circle. From the thwartboat the stopnet is thrown, forming a sort of continuation of the circle, but the follower remains at the point of departure to prevent the fish from passing through the opening between the ends of the two nets.

As soon as the seine is shot the work of the "blowsers" begins. Twenty to forty of these take the warp or line at its shore end, attach it to a huge capstan and begin drawing it inshore. At the same time another line called the towrope is carried from the opposite extremity, and with this the men in the seineboat warp the net inward. The nets, with the fish inclosed or penned in, are now brought near enough to land to be out of tide's way and are safely moored.

Gathering in or taking up the fish is called "tucking." When the tide is low the seineboat is utilized within the moored seine, and has on board what is called a "tucknet." With this the fish are scooped from the wriggling shoal and brought so near the surface that they may be dipped out of the sea in a basket. Boat-load after boatload is thus taken until enough are secured to be handled in the curing process between one low tide and another, and when the shoals are large a week of night and day work is often required.

"Tucking" at night is always an interesting and often a brilliant scene in St. Ives' bay; the boats hastening to and fro, the oars sparkling with phosphorescence at every sturdy stroke; the subdued yet eager activity of the fishermen as they plunge their baskets into the water to raise at each dip a stream of quivering silver; the bustle and excitement along the pier and the busy streets where the labor never ceases so long as the shoal holds out; and then old St. Ives hanging like ragged mistletoe from the heights above, with the terrace lights like a flashing tiara, are all worth storing away among the pleasant pictures of the memory.

From the boats the pilchards are taken to the cellars and storehouses in "gurries." These are square vessels like open boxes, with handles at each end. The fish are salted in bulk, that is, they are built into huge piles, in alternate layers of fish and salt. All this work is done by women and girls who are quite as powerful in all necessary handling and carrying as the men, and far more dexterous.

The fish are allowed to remain in bulk for thirty or forty days. During this time a vast amount of "pickle" and oil drains away, finding its way into receptacles from which the oil is skimmed. Then the fish are washed perfectly clean in huge troughs, when they are put with great nicety and in regular layers into casks, locally called "hogsheads," of fifty-two gallons each. They are then subjected to strong pressure for a week, causing another large flow of oil, after which they are headed up and are ready for exportation to Mediterranean ports.

These curers of St. Ives are the wives, daughters and sweethearts of the St. Ives fishermen, brawny of arm, stout of frame, among the cleanest of women at home, not given to the unrepeatable billingsgate of the Thames-side fishwives; and they get more pleasure out of their neighborly "teas" and their Wesleyan prayer meetings than is secured out of any manner of diversion by any other lowly women I know. But despite the prayer meetings they enjoy their rough larks and play, which are usually the source of discomfiture to some man of their own kind who has been caught at some unforgivable peccadillo, or some "oopstart" stranger whom they dearly love to "hustle" for awhile and then treat to a bath in the harbor or within some convenient vat of "pickle" and oil. Indeed, throughout all Cornwall all women who work at man's labor in gangs together, like these St. Ives fisherwives and the "bal girls," or mining pit brow lasses, seem to have a penchant for treating any man who has secured their dislike in so rough a way that it often merges upon brutality.

Among their immemorial customs none is more rigidly adhered to or more likely to make trouble to a supercilious stranger than the one among the St. Ives fishwives of "wiping the shoe." If you by chance step into one of these huge fish curing cellars, where from 50 to 100 St. Ives fishwomen are at work, their shrill clack and clatter of voices are instantly hushed. Some substantially built middle aged woman advances to you and without a word gives the toe of one of your shoes a quick wipe with a bit of old rag filled with oil. That is all there is to "wiping the shoe," if you immediately respond with a half crown, or even a shilling. This is counted as "paying your reckoning" for satisfying your curiosity, and the proceeds go into a common fund. If you fail to at once furnish the gratuity, you are suddenly surrounded and roughly "hustled," in the meantime coming in contact with rough knuckles and hard elbows, which these fishwives know how to savagely handle, and you are certain to at last land in the bay or the more disagreeable "pickle" and oil vat.

It is not more than eight miles across from St. Ives' bay on the north to Mount's bay on the south of the Cornish peninsula. On the latter stands Penzance, and setting forth in that direction I found that just beyond St. Earth the highways diverged. Being in doubt as to the right one, I approached a group of miners' cottages for inquiry and secured another illustration, among hundreds that have come to my notice in Cornwall, of the ineradicable suspicion which possesses the Cornish intellect regarding all things which seems to savor of inconsistency, as well as unhesitating hospitality and generosity, even when the object of the same seems to the Cornishman to be wholly an unworthy one.

I spoke to a brawny miner just as he was leaving his cottage to take up his work in the mine with the "afternoon corps," which goes "below grass" at 2 o'clock, telling him that as I had walked the length of Cornwall from Plymouth I wished to reach Penzance the same way, and not by rail from St. Ives.

"Awd rat tha! Tha cussn't (cannot, stuff me!" he replied, with genuine scorn in his honest face.

I saw he had mistaken me for a tramp, and I turned away with a cheery "Good day." He bellowed to me instantly:

"If tha'll wait a bit, my son, aw'll see if Ginny (his wife) can spare tha a mossel."

There was not a "mossel" to eat left in "Cousin Jack's" house, as his "crib" or lunch bag held the last "faggon" or "pasty," but his generosity was not to be defeated. He soon reappeared and pressed upon me a miner's candle, putting it in my pocket with his own rough hands, and sending me along the right road to Penzance with many bellowed parting words of cheer.

This candle was a mystery to me at the time, but I soon discovered its significance and value. Through some ancient custom or mining regulation a "corps" of miners is compelled each month to buy a certain number of pounds of candles. These are the best quality of candles known in Cornwall, and all other lowly folk like to get them. So the overplus is carefully saved, divided among the mine "pairdners" and taken home to the miners' wives, who exchange them for trifling luxuries and necessities at the shops. Miners' candles are therefore currency of the realm, "as can'ls worth of tay," cheese, eggs, sugar, etc., having been from time immemorial equivalent to a "ha'penny 'orth" of these or other articles in exchange.

The traveler will learn that the pleasure in visiting Penzance is to be found in the extraordinary objects of interest and the glorious coast scenery accessible from the town, rather than in the place itself. It is barren of antiquities and historic charm. There were once some smugglers here. Sir Humphry Davy was a native of the place. A comic opera has been written about it. That is nearly all, besides numberless inns and lodging houses, which you can find to interest you here.

It is, however, the metropolis of the Land's End district of Cornwall and is always running over with tourists for whom the famous logan or rocking stone, the sublime headlands, the hoary parish churches roundabout, the grand old ecclesiastic antique, St. Michael's mount (which must not be confounded with Mont St. Michael on the coast of Normandy), and Land's End itself, the southwesternmost point in England, have an endless fascination. One feature of Penzance itself is indicative of the genuine enjoyment of English people in summer in their trips by coach or in humbler traps or vans. In the one long, narrow street of the city you can on any summer's day count from 100 to 200 of these vehicles, whose occupants, as there is no railway or town of any importance beyond Penzance, are tarrying here for refreshment and rest.

But Mount's bay itself, at the edge of which rests Penzance, on almost level ground behind her huge breakwater, and from which St. Michael's mount rises to a very great height with sheer escarpments of granite on three sides, and the dim old crag, crowned by mass upon mass of mediæval towers, is one of the most charming marine bits for observation and study in Europe.

The bay is horseshoe shaped, its mouth opening directly to the south upon the English channel, which is at all times covered with sailing craft and steamers. On the right or western side is Penzance, backed by farreaching hills, and straggling off to the southwest toward the headlands of Mousehole and St. Clements. On the north of the bay, asleep in the shimmer of the summer sun, is Marazion, a market for Cornish tin controlled by Jews from 1,500 to 2,000 years ago. Around this old place cluster some of the most curious legends of Cornwall's remote past.

The western boundary of the bay is formed by one of the strangest roadways in the world. From the mainland near Marazion winds a submarine thoroughfare, certainly submarine at high tide, to the far grim mount within the sea. At low tide it is high and dry and a splendid means of communication between the island and the land. No one has ever been able to solve the mystery of this singular road; and whether a natural phenomenon or made by the hand of man you can only conjecture as you wend your way upon it with the gray old height looming vaster and more mysterious as you approach.

Poets have made it their theme; artists have been delighted with the picturesque grandeur and beauty of its overhanging rocks, and kings have fought furiously for its possession and mastery. The legend is that St. Michael, the archangel, appeared here in 495, and in consequence of this it was visited by St. Kenna, who founded a religious establishment to commemorate the event. It is known, however, that a priory of Benedictine monks was placed here by Edward the Confessor, and the mount was exclusively devoted to religion until the time of Richard I. Since that time it has been the scenes of countless defenses and captures, captivities and imurements, valor and treachery. In 1660 it came into the possession of the St. Aubyns, of Cornwall, who have continued to beautify this one of the most extraordinary spots in the world.

At the northern base are extensive fortifications and a village. At the top of the mount there is a more striking collection of buildings, formed for the purpose of religious uses and the stoutest defense in mediæval times to be found elsewhere in Great Britain. The guardroom with its ancient armor is alone worthy of a month's study. Warwick Castle cannot boast grander parts. The chapel, which is fitted up with stalls in the manner of a cathedral, and chapel tower deserve to rank among the most venerable and stately curiosities in Europe. The Chevy Chase room, which the old refectory is now called, from the maze of hunting scenes upon its frieze, is a marvelous study in ancient oak carving.

The present owner of this surpassing mediæval relic is Sir John St. Aubyn, of Cornwall, and the royal family are his guests here nearly every year.

THE "SOUTH FIELD" COAL is now used by all the Leading Steamship Lines on the Pacific.

THE "NEW WELLINGTON" COAL, which was introduced early in the present year, has already become a favorite fuel for domestic purposes. It is a clean, hard coal, makes a bright and cheerful fire, and its lasting qualities make it the most economical fuel in the market.

PROVINCIAL NEWS.

REVELSTOKE.

Bain & Boyd have sold their mining claim, "Dunvagan," at Fish Creek, to Messrs. Fishburn and Fowler, Golden, for $15,000; $1,000 down, and the balance within twelve months.

It is stated that the C. & K. Nav. Co. intend building a steamer to run on the Okanagon lake some time in the near future. This opens up a wide field for speculation, as there is little doubt of the C.P.R. being connected with the venture, and the big railway will in all probability find its way into the Okanagon valley by way of Fire valley, the only pass through the Gold range yet discovered besides the Eagle pass at Revelstoke.

Mr. Angus McKinnon, of Ontario, and Miss Eleanor Isabella Cairns, of Griswold, Manitoba, were married at the minister's house, Revelstoke, on the 13th inst., the Rev. C. Ladner officiating.

A fire brigade was organized at a meeting held on Tuesday night.

Mr. W. R. Reed, and Miss J. D. Woods, both of Revelstoke, were married at a rather late hour Saturday evening at the residence of Rev. C. Ladner. The happy couple went to Donald. It was close upon midnight when the boys from the mill, with Morgan at their head, arrived in front of the new Reid mansion, and then the din from the pots and pans obscured the rising moon and made the mountains tremble.

GOLDEN.

One of the railway bridges near Golden was rendered useless for a time last week on account of the heavy current in the river, caused by the unusually high waters of the Columbia. A train was delayed several hours in consequence on Saturday last. The Duchess had to discharge her cargo at the slough instead of at the company's wharf as formerly.

Mr. S. S. Fowler, superintendent of the Golden Mining and Smelting Co.'s works here, has recently had the honor of being elected a member of the American Institute of Mining Engineers.

The Smelter Townsite Co. are still busily engaged grading, and putting things in shape on their property.

The annual races at Windermere will take place on Saturday, August 6th.

NAKUSP.

A petition to the Provincial Government, praying that the present trail to Slocan Lake be made into a wagon road, is being circulated through West Kootenay, and has already received close upon 200 signatures.

J. E. Walsh and George Laforme are working hard with their pack horses, but they cannot carry every kind of freight.

Several fine buildings are completed, notably the "Nakusp House," by Cowan & Madden; Rathwell's Hotel, Thomas's Hotel, Lemon's store, Bourne Bros.' store, J. E. Walsh & Co.'s feed store and stables, offices and dwelling; Dave Cowan's blacksmith shop, Holman's real estate office, and McDougall's dwelling.

Lots are selling rapidly, nearly the whole of the land cleared having been disposed of.

The Gun Factory.

WASHINGTON, July 20.—There is a provision in the fortification bill introduced by Senator Felton and adopted by the Senate authorizing the appointment of a board to examine and report upon the best location for a gun foundry on the Pacific coast, and an appropriation of $3500 is now being considered. What the result may be cannot be stated definitely, but there is good chance for its acceptance by the conference. It carries no appropriation for the foundry, the appropriation of $1,000,000 having been disagreed to by the Senate.

THE COLONIST HITS THEM HARD.

TO THE EDITOR:—Take the following from the editorial of the Colonist of the 13th inst.: "But there are many teachers who are such slaves to systems and forms and fashions that they cannot be convinced that anything can be done right if it is not done strictly according to rule and regulation. It is these martinets and pedagogues who ill treat and tyrannise over the left-handed boy."

You may remember that Dr. Pope was willing to deprive the children in a whole school district of the chance of getting an education by closing their school summarily, the cause being as he (Pope) wrote, "chiefly the statement of the teacher that the rules and regulations had not been observed during the month." Dr. Pope stated on oath that another school "was summarily closed for the same reason at the same time," etc. The Legislature decided that the school had been closed "strictly in accordance with the practices of the department in such cases." Thus the innocent children of two school districts were summarily deprived of the chance of getting an education because the rules and regulations had not been strictly observed by the teacher. No ill treatment about that—of course not.

You may also remember that because a teacher certified that he had not according to rule and regulation daily inspected the outhouses and daily reported their condition to the school trustees, his certificate was cancelled, as Dr. Pope wrote "for persistent neglect to obey the rules and regulations." No tyranny about that, either. Our education department does not tyrannize, oh, no.

You will also find that according to the new school act, the teachers must observe the rules strictly. May not the education department (slaves and martinets indeed) exclaim, oh, save us from our friends.

Does the Colonist not owe an apology to our teachers because they are bound by statute to strictly observe the rules; and also to the Legislature because it passed such a law as to make them slaves? "CRITIC."

The Rubber Industry.

No other industry has made more marked and rapid progress with the present generation than the rubber industry. The discovery of rubber was made in 1735 by the French expedition to South America, but the product did not receive any attention from Great Britain until about 1806. Its first uses were of the most primitive kind. About 1820 great clumsy "gum shoes" were produced, which, though impervious to moisture, were so heavy and unsightly as to be unpopular. Experiment constantly busied itself with the substance, however, until 1860, when 60 patents covering rights in rubber manufacture had been issued. In 1830 the total importation of crude "caoutchouc" was less than 50,000 pounds, which quantity had increased in 1842 to 800,000 pounds. There is now an annual demand for millions of tons of this material, every civilized nation of the world joining in it. It enters in some form in so large a variety of manufactures that the trees of Central and South America, Madagascar, India and Java that weep the malodorous gum which is the basis of this manufactured product furnish employment and livelihood to hundreds of thousands of human beings.

PROOF WANTED.

TO THE EDITOR.—I see by Provincial Health Officer Davie's report that so far in no case has there been a death among those who have been vaccinated. Is he prepared to make an affidavit to that effect? Can he say that Eckert was not vaccinated? VERITAS.

THE MAN ABOUT TOWN.

I strongly advise merchants to be on their guard in giving credit. Not a few are using the "scare" as an argument to obtain goods without cash. Remittances not arrived, uncertainty of location, &c., are the stock excuses, and more than one trader is mourning because of his too confiding nature and guileless innocence. Hotels can be easily victimized by persons supposed to change residences for prudential reasons. Letters from persons out of town should be carefully scrutinized.

One of the chief difficulties in fruit raising is to produce a large gooseberry without mildew. The North American continent seems specially prone to this form of blight. Gooseberry bushes have been imported from various countries and saving only the very small kind, which appear to be indigenous to the soil, all more or less gradually yield to the mildew. In England, however, this is one of the hardiest and most easily grown of all berries, and a wonderful variety and large growths are to be found in that much favored island. I saw, however, yesterday some large, ripe gooseberries grown by Mrs. Wilson, of Edmonton Farm, which were very luscious and had apparently escaped the general fate of the larger kinds. I think our enterprising horticulturists might turn their attention to this phenomenon.

I notice that the Premier's private organ is trying to comfort its readers with the thought that Protection principles are growing in England. They point out that certain Chambers of Commerce by narrow majorities have shown a certain sympathy with retaliatory duties. If the writer had the barest possible acquaintance with commercial affairs in the mother country, he would know that the Chambers of Commerce are entirely unrepresentative in their character; that a small subscription entitles anyone to become a member, as indeed it does in the Victoria Board of Trade. Further, that these Chambers of Commerce are mainly composed of manufacturers, whose trade is often hardly hit by foreign tariffs, as the McKinley Bill, and then they call out for a measure of relief.

It is astonishing how fast the single-tax movement is winning its way. The old-fashioned Conservative and the advanced Grit alike seem to fancy there's something in it. The single-tax men themselves are the greatest enthusiasts I ever met with. They are single-tax in everything. The tariff suggests it. The labor questions suggest it. The depression or inflation in business suggests it. Good or bad harvests suggest it. Fisheries and sealing suggest it. Things terrestrial and things celestial suggest it, and I am somewhat of the opinion that if in the world to come Henry George shall there be found, he will have a devoted band of followers who will carry on their propaganda in that region of the blest. Their new issue in this city is certainly a very creditable periodical.

Scarcely any notice seems to have been taken of the death of Thomas Cooper, the Chartist leader. A generation back he was one of the foremost men of his time. Of obscure birth and scanty education, seeing the evils that oppressed his fellows, he announced and carried on for years unremittingly the advanced reform programme, which ultimately became fused with the Chartist movement. Maddened by wrong, urged to desperation by the indifference to the sufferings and starvation of the peasantry by the government of the day, the Chartists resorted to force. Naturally the authorities triumphed, and Cooper with others was imprisoned. He lived, however, to see the triumph of the greater number of the six points of the Charter and the practical adoption of the main principles for which he struggled and suffered. As an author he was most successful and many editions of his books were published in his life time. I have heard the 'old man eloquent" lecture, and although he was at the time nearly an octogenarian, his vivacity, fire and vigor were truly astonishing. Requiescat in pace. Thou hast fought a good fight, hast finished thy course, hast kept the faith. Henceforth the crown of righteousness. QUIZ.

Ships That go Down.

Professor Shaler in Scribner's:—It has to many persons been an interesting speculation as to the aspect of the countless wrecks which have been swallowed up by the North Atlantic since the churn of waters has been plowed by the keels of ships. Their number is probably to be reckoned by the tens of thousands, and the greater part of them lie in a comparatively small part of that field. If we count this portion of the Atlantic which is most peopled with wrecks as having an area of 3,000,000 square miles, and estimate the total number of such ruins within this space as 30,000, we should have an average of one sunken ship for each hundred square miles of surface. If all these crafts were at once sailing over the surface of the sea we should, from the deck of any one of them, be likely to note the masts of several others. But as they lie on the floor of the ocean the greater part of them are probably reduced to low mounds of rubbish, so that if the ocean floor were converted into dry ground and we crossed in a railway, seeing the fields as we do the prairies, it would require an attentive eye to discern the existence of many of these remains.
